of his farming implements, and a lot of corn, ogether with his stable, in which were two horses, were totally destroyed by fire night before last. Colonel Ruffin estimates his loss at $10,000, upon which he has no insurance.

For months past several attempts have been made to burn not only Colonel Ruffin's barn and out-houses, but also his fine dwelling-house. At one time the lady members as well as the gentlemen of his household were forced to keep a regular watch upon the house, relieving each other at intervals, in order to prevent his property from being burned in the dead hour of the night while his family were sleeping, and not suspecting danger. This was kept up without inter-

For the last forty-eight hours rain has been coming down almost continually, and the streams begin to show evidences of accessions of the watery element. THRILLING DETAILS AND INCIDENTS. PITTSBURGH, July 29 .- Half of the thrilling details of the great flood have not yet been told. A. W. Cole, one of the members of the firm of Chambers & Co., whose glue works were entirely wrecked, states that when the flood of waters began to descend no one had any idea that the flood would reach the great proportions which it afterwards assumed. Mr. Cole, who during the storm stood outside of his dwelling, located just in rear of the hill at the upper end of the glue works. says that the hill bad the appearance of an immense sheet of water, as outlined on the opposite hill when lighted up by continuous flishes of lightning. When the great flood of water rushed down the run he likened the roar produced to the roar of Niagara Falls. Mr. Cole also describes incidents attending the destruction of the dwelling of Augustus Renkauf and the drowning of little Emma, aged three years; Mary Renkauf, aged one year; and the nurse girl, Miss Nolling, aged fourteen years. When the flood began, Renkauf was visiting his brother, on Spring Garden run. Mrs. Renkauf went to her front door to ascertain the ex- ron to the coast of Spain will effect a happy tent of the flood, and upon opening it the water rushed in in a great volume, was soon several feel deep. A number of articles of furniture were jammed up against the door leading to the second story, where her children were. She found she was unable to get up the staircase and then tried to get to the rear of the house if possible, to save her sleeping little ones by the up-stairs window. She tried in vain to door the side facing Allegheny river fell out, the run about a hundred yards and caught on the top of some debris of the Glue Works. She clambered over this, a distance of fifty feet, from which point she had to wade in the water, waist deep, twenty yards to the shore. Her calls for assistance were responded to by several men who assisted ber to reach the shore. She is in delicate health, and the courage she displayed was remarkable. During the time that Mrs. Renkauf was being swept away A. W. Cole, with his brother Isaac, went to the rear of the house, and, by shouting at the top of their voices endeavored to awaken the children. The roar of the torrent, however, drowned their voices, and they were unable to make themselves heard. They then picked up clumps of earth and threw them at the window, but just then the house was swept away and disappeared in the flood, and the three children were crushed to death in its crumbling ruins. Their mangled bodies were found one hundred and fifty yards below the scene.
